

Steve Myers, Program Manager

Steve serves as the Homeland Security Program Manager for the Pacific NorthWest Economic Region (PNWER). Since September 2007, he provides subject matter expertise to PNWER's Center for Regional Disaster Resilience on homeland security and emergency management issues by undertaking research, planning, project management, developing workshops and seminars, and performing outreach, facilitation, and other technical assistance and educational activities for stakeholders. He also provides information and insight on relevant legislative issues. He has worked extensively at the Federal and State levels of government coordinating National Security and Emergency Management issues.

Before join PNWER, Steve worked for Nebraska State Governor, Dave Heineman and for the Nebraska State Emergency Management Agency. Prior to his time in Nebraska, he worked at the National Security Council for the Executive Office of the President, a position which required knowledge of multiple international and Homeland Security issues.
