

Idaho Cyber Security INTERDEPENDENCIES WORKSHOP

November 13, 2014 | 9:30 am - 4:30 pm | Garden City, ID

Join us for a regional discussion of current cyber threats and common challenges with managing complex data, personal information, and cyber systems.

WHO SHOULD ATTEND: Critical infrastructure owners/operators, major employers, Emergency managers and affiliated IT support staff, security, law enforcement, and all other private/public sector cyber security professionals

Idaho Bureau of Homeland Security and the Pacific NorthWest Economic Region (PNWER) Center for Regional Disaster Resilience will be hosting the workshop on November 13. Cyber threats are increasing every day putting the economy and our personal information at risk. This event will include a discussion of current cyber threats and common challenges with managing complex data and access and begin the process of developing a resilience public/private partnership in Idaho. Topics include:

- The current cyber threat landscape
- Cyber Interdependencies – Examining the Cascading impacts of cyber incidents
- Regional capabilities and resources
- Lessons Learned and best practices in cyber preparedness and response
- Industrial Control Systems (ICS) and Supervisory Control and Data Acquisition (SCADA) systems
- Cyber policy development

This event is the first in a three year series meant to develop an Idaho Partnership for Infrastructure Security. The primary purpose of developing an Idaho Partnership is to advance cross-sector initiatives which facilitate public-private, cross jurisdictional regional efforts to develop a disaster resilient state and region. In the face of emerging risks to economic and national security, action is needed to address crucial regional infrastructure interdependencies in energy, telecommunications, transportation, water systems and other infrastructures.
